The Cincinnat Engineer, or Tuesday, responded: "There has been more activity in banking circles during the past week, though not the consequence of any general increase in trade. The hogy killing season is now in full blast, and as pork balances in bank were much smaller this year than is usual, packers have become borrowers carrier than usual, which in part answers for the improvement in the loan market. The forwarding of produce from the south and west to the east has been brisk, causing liberal shipments of currency to the interior and swelling the business in exchange. An other feature which was plain to berylid was the very considerable increase in Lemand for government bonds for inversance, conting largely from persons who have had their considence in banks were, enced by the numerous recent failures of a large series and the surface of the surf with moderate but sufficient supply.

A Cairo dispatch received at this office last night says Diver Ham Hill reports the prospects unfavorable for raising the Bee. The water yesterday morning was over her boiler deck and the boat badly listed. The John A. Scudder got away for New Orleans last night with 1406 bales cotton, 525 barrels oil, 20 tons miscellaneous freights, and 30 cabin passengers shipped from the Lee wharfboat, besides 400 barrels oil and 400 Lee whartboat, besides 400 barrels oil and 400 sacks oil-cake shipped at Hopefield.

The towboat Bee, which sunk above Cape Girardeau, Missouri, was built at Pittsburg in 1864, and was 165 feet long by 28 feet beam, and 5 feet hold. She was purchased by the Mississippi Valley transportation line, in 1866, and had made one hundred and twenty trips in the St. Louis and New Ortwenty trips in the St. Louis and New Or-leans trade. Ohio, loaded with hay and potatoes; the boa of Captain Alf Wilson, loaded with an as sortment of produce, passed down for Bayou La Fourche. Captain Poke Miller was at the island above with a boat load of potatoes from Amsterdam, Iowa. Also two other boats, one of them commanded by M'Knight, loaded with cabbage. Prices here did not suit them and they continued their downward The pilots who are taking tows south of Louisville are as follows: Fred Wilson No. 2 boat is burned, every passenger aboard her at the time may sue the owners for the value of the baggage lost, swearing to any value he may see fit to place on it—and the owners will have to pay. Both these provisions are unjust and unreasonable, the latter particularly. There is no more propriety in making the owners of a steamboat hable for the loss of a passenger's baggage by fire than there would be in making the proprietors of a hotel responsible in a similar case. The steamboal laws of the United States have been the work, in a large degree, of eastern legisla-tors, who proceeded on the assumption that western steamboatmen were addicted to the practice of sinking, exploding and burning their vessels just for the sport of the thing, or from pure recklessness, and that, therefore, they could not be too rigorously dealt with. The steamboat interest is to be found in the west chiefly, and many eastern legislators imagine that it matters little what burdens may be imposed on these western vocations that do not keep a deputation of lobbyists at Washington to look after their interests. Steamboating is not a lawless business that requires to be discouraged by oppressive tributes and exactions. There has been too much of that. It affords the cheapest method of freight carriage, and extensive ties are dependent on it for facilities that the railroad cannot supply. It deserves every reasonable aid and encouragement that congress can give it. It does not ask for special favors; it asks only to be exempt from oppressive ex-
